By answering this question, we can see differences in influence of COVID 19 on companies
→ Learn from good ones

Wait, Did Covid 19 actually affect stock price?

Let's plot their correlation !!

Changes in Meta Platforms, Inc. 's stock price vs Covid 19 spread speed

Jan 2020 to July 2020

Look a bit closer

- From the vertical lines starting from the peak of COVID-19 growing speed, this point corresponds to the lowest stock price week in most companies

A bigger picture

Changes in Apple Inc. 's stock price vs Covid 19 spread speed
Jan 2020 to July 2020

Changes in Amazon.com, Inc. 's stock price vs Covid 19 spread speed

Jan 2020 to July 2020

Ok, so the impact is confirmed.

But among those companies, which one suffer the most ?

OUR METRIC of LOSS value

Base price = Price at 22 - 1 - 2020

```
if (price < base_price) {
  loss <- loss + (base_price - price) * volume transactions <- transactions + volume
}
```

loss = (expected price - actual price) * volume)

What company perform worst ?

But why ? Apple Stock Price drop insanely ?

NAH ! Another reason

Large volume of AAPL stock transactions

In Average,.....

Answer for the question:

- Yes, COVID 19 did have strong impact on tech companies' stock prices, but its influence varies among those giants.
- The young, entertaining or online shopping companies tended to perform better due to the high demand for their products from customer in lockdown situation.
- In general, tech companies suffer more critical damages compared to groceries or medical sectors. However, the recovery speed is much faster. Therefore, their stock prices are greater than other after the pandemic

Further research:

- Need larger and more reliable datasets about COVID 19 cases
- Other small tech companies data is also necessary if we want to see how COVID 19 affect the technology industry in general.
